Series 226

GOVERNOR (1909-1916 : SPRY) [446]

CORRESPONDENCE, 1908-1916.

13 cu. ft., and 30 reels of microfilm

DESCRIPTION: An account of the primary activities of Governor Spry's two terms in office has been preserved in this series. As chief executive of the state, the correspondence reflects his involvement in a wide range of important administrative matters. Described are his efforts to see completion of a permanent home for state government, to increase development of the state's natural resources, to improve irrigation and water rights, to establish higher standards for agricultural products, to upgrade banking practices, to institute more equitable taxation, to provide better working conditions for children, and to promote industrial safety. Contained in the series are letters from citizens, private institutions, and businesses requesting assistance and making suggestions; descriptions of legal positions; fiscal information; correspondence within state government, with officials from other states, and with officials from the federal government.

Well documented is Governor Spry's determination to see completion of a state capitol building during his administration. Due largely to his insistence, the legislature approved the creation of a Capitol Commission to assume responsibility for the project. Outlined are the planning, designing, and construction activities which resulted in completion of the building in October 1916, during Spry's second term.

Financial reports provide convincing evidence of the following activities: that it was common practice for railroads and mining interests to avoid a large share of taxes owed through under assessment and under reporting; that there was a huge discrepancy between funds reported to be in national banks of Utah by the comptroller and what was reported by the state auditor; that assessors reported close to a million less sheep than those discovered by sheep inspectors. In response to these findings a Board of Commissioners on Revenue and Taxation, appointed by the Governor, was asked to address these inequities. The legislature, responding to the Governor's reports and other evidence passed significant changes in the revenue laws to provide for accurate property assessment and more equitable taxation. Many banking laws were changed; a State Banking Department was created, with a commissioner appointed by the Governor, to examine Utah banks at least once yearly.

ARRANGEMENT: The series is arranged into chronological subseries: Correspondence from 1908 through 1910 are filed together; later years are separated. Such divisions are not absolute. Each subseries is then arranged alphabetically by the first letter of the folder title. Further chronological divisions occur where necessary.

RELATED RECORDS: Correspondence about these same issues received by the Governor from personal friends and relatives are in series 2930, PERSONAL CORRESPONDENCE. Governor Spry's LETTERBOOKS contain responses to many of the letters in this series. Letters of application for positions received by the Governor before 1909 are in series 2937, EMPLOYMENT CORRESPONDENCE.

PROCESSING NOTE: These records were transferred to the archives from the Office of the Governor in 1955. Microfilming of the correspondence occurred during 1976. Archival processing was completed during 1991 by J.B. Brinkerhoff.

GAPS IN THE SERIES: Items missed in the initial filming may be spliced at the beginning of the appropriate reel.
